

The Project Content Goldmine Audit

Turn your last completed jobs into website proof, Google visibility, before-and-after content, homeowner FAQs, reviews, and better-fit calls.

Your work already proves you're good. This checklist shows you how to make that proof easier for homeowners, Google, and AI search tools to find.

- Find the hidden marketing value inside one finished project.
- Score the proof you already have and identify what is missing.
- Turn one job into multiple assets for your website, Google, social, and sales process.

How to use this audit

Pick one recent project first. Do not overthink it. Choose a job that represents the kind of work you want more of: a kitchen, bathroom, addition, ADU, deck, roof, outdoor living project, custom build, flooring job, or any project with a clear before, process, and result.

Fill out the sections, score what you already have, and circle the missing pieces. By the end, you will know whether that project can become useful marketing content or whether it needs a few extra details before it is ready.

Quick scorecard

Asset	Yes / No
Before photos	☐ Yes ☐ No
During or progress photos	☐ Yes ☐ No
After photos from multiple angles	☐ Yes ☐ No
City or neighborhood documented	☐ Yes ☐ No
Homeowner's original problem written down	☐ Yes ☐ No
Materials, finishes, or products listed	☐ Yes ☐ No
Timeline documented	☐ Yes ☐ No
Cost range or budget factors documented	☐ Yes ☐ No
Client quote, review, or testimonial	☐ Yes ☐ No
Clear next-step CTA on your website	☐ Yes ☐ No

Score: 0–3 mostly invisible online | 4–6 useful proof, needs structure | 7–8 several strong assets | 9–10 full content goldmine

The project snapshot

Start here. The more specific this gets, the easier it is to turn the project into content that homeowners actually care about.

Question	Your answer
What type of project was it?
What city or neighborhood was it in?
What service do you want this project to help sell?
What kind of client was this?
Why did they call you?
What problem were they trying to solve?
What result did they care about most?

Tip: The homeowner's original problem is often the best hook. Start with what was frustrating, broken, outdated, unsafe, too small, or no longer working for them.

The proof checklist

The best project content usually needs more than one after photo. Homeowners want to see what changed, how the work was done, and whether the finished result feels trustworthy.

Photo asset	Have it?	Notes
Before photo from the main angle	☐
Before photo showing the biggest problem	☐
During photo showing progress	☐
During photo showing craftsmanship or detail	☐
After photo from the same angle as the before photo	☐
After photo from a wide angle	☐
After photo showing the best detail	☐
Team or process photo	☐

The story behind the photos

Pretty photos help. The story is what makes the project sell. Use this section to turn the job into proof, not just a gallery.

Story element	Prompt
The problem	What was frustrating, outdated, broken, unsafe, too small, or not working for the homeowner?
The goal	What did the homeowner want the space to feel like or do better?
The challenge	What made this project tricky?
The solution	What did your team do that solved the problem?
The result	What changed after the project was complete?
The proof	What did the client say when it was done?

Plain-English rule: If a homeowner would ask about it before hiring you, it can become content.

The content goldmine map

One strong project can become many marketing assets. Use this map to decide what to create first.

Turn this project into	What to use	Why it matters
Website project page	Before/after photos, story, neighborhood	Shows proof and supports local search
Google Business Profile post	Best after photo, short summary, service area	Keeps your Google listing active
Before-and-after reel	Main before, main after, simple caption	Makes the transformation easy to understand
FAQ content	Timeline, cost factors, homeowner questions	Answers what people ask before they call
Review request	Client result, project details, thank-you note	Turns a happy customer into visible proof
Sales proposal proof	Similar project photos and result	Helps the next homeowner trust your estimate
Neighborhood content	City, subdivision, project type	Shows where you actually do work

The homeowner questions hiding inside this project

Every project answers questions future homeowners are already asking. Check any question this project could help answer.

- [] How much does this kind of project cost?
- [] How long does this kind of project take?
- [] What affects the price?
- [] What materials did you use?
- [] Can I live in the house during the project?
- [] What should I expect before work starts?
- [] What problems should I watch for?
- [] How do I know if I need a permit?
- [] What makes one contractor different from another?
- [] What should I ask before hiring someone?

Question	Short answer

AEO note: Short, direct answers to real homeowner questions help search and AI tools understand what your business is qualified to answer.¹

¹ Footbridge Media AEO guide for contractors: <https://www.footbridgemedia.com/marketing-tips/aEO-contractors-home-service-companies>

The better-lead filter

The goal is not just more calls. The goal is better calls from homeowners who understand what you do, trust your work, and are closer to hiring before you spend time on an estimate.

Filter question	Your answer
What kind of project do you want more of?
What budget range or project size is a good fit?
What red flags show someone is not a good fit?
What should homeowners understand before asking for an estimate?
What makes your process different from cheaper options?

Use this section to make your website and project pages pre-qualify better. Bad leads cost time even when they look free.

Project page outline

Use this structure to turn one completed job into a website page that proves your work and gives search engines clear local context.

Section	What to include
Page title	[Project type] in [city/neighborhood]: Before and After
The problem	Why the homeowner called and what was not working
The plan	What you recommended and why
The work	Process, timeline, materials, and key decisions
The result	After photos and what changed
The proof	Review, testimonial, or client quote
The next step	Clear CTA: call, request estimate, or send project details

Example CTA: Planning a [project type] in [city]? Send us a few details about your project and we'll help you understand the best next step.

10 content prompts from one project

1. Before I show you the after, here's what this homeowner was dealing with.
2. This is what changed in this project and why it matters.
3. The biggest challenge on this project was not what you think.
4. Here's what affects the cost of a project like this.
5. Here's how long this project took from start to finish.
6. Three decisions that made this result work.
7. What this homeowner asked before hiring us.
8. Why we chose one material instead of another.
9. What we would tell anyone planning this same project.
10. The part of this project most people do not see.

Your next action

Choose one project this week and turn it into one project page, one Google Business Profile post, one before-and-after social post, one FAQ answer, and one review request.

Want help finding the hidden marketing value in your completed projects?
Book a Project Content Goldmine Audit.